>>get internet in '08
>>meet first internet friend on same day >>we'll call him Tim >>talk to Tim almost everyday for 2 years >>in the two years we talked, he was always really reluctant to show me pictures of himself (he said he was shy)
>>I think I only ever saw two pictures of Tim, both small (avatar sized) and edited somewhat, so it's difficult to really know what he looked like

from the pictures

>>I added a couple of his friends on msn (pretty sure he gave me their emails) >>one day he isn't on, one of his friends is online >>his friend tells me that Tim ran away from home for a day, so he's at his house now >>don't think his friends were ever online again >>a while after, Tim tells me he's started counselling (he's depressed, and he's pretty sure his step-dad hates him)
>>Tim stops going online as much >>Tim says he will come online more often >>never hear from Tim again >>that was in 2010
>>sent him emails, messages, no reply >>check his online profiles, no activity >>search facebook using his email, no profile >>search facebook using his friends' email, no profiles >>notice that his friends' emails have a similar theme to his >>start to wonder if Tim is dead >>or if he was really the person he was telling me he was

Have you ever had internet friends that disappeared mysteriously?

Oh yeah, I've had that. There was this one guy back in ~2009 I met through video games. He was a pretty cool dude, we had good times, we even had a christmas gift exchange ( yay steam ). Many idle hours were spent chatting and such, he introduced me to some of his friends ( A couple of which I still talk to ).

Then, one day, 2011, he stopped coming online. Never saw him again. I asked his friends what was up with that, but they didn't know either.

I miss him.

when i was like...12 i think i played an mmorpg called last chaos (yes its pretty shitty). i joined a guild and i got to know the people. our guild lead (lets call her Sabrina) and her wife (Marie). And their best friend (alex). lets call him i played with them everyday and had a lot of fun with them. alex was like a big brother for me. after about 3 months they told me that our guild lead has cancer. after 1 year he quit the game, i almost cried because my real brother always was a dick and i really saw alex as a brother. then he started playing cabal...i was like "fuck this i want to talk with him" and started playing it too. after some time our lead and her wife joined too. i was happy...then they never came back online again. i have no idea what happened but im afraid the cancer got my sabrina. marie came back online for once but didnt talk too much. she seemed depressed...well that was long time ago but i still wish i could talk and have fun with them one more time.

I had a story like that.

Let me tell you right now.... Mine is the most epic story ever.

I had an e-relationship with some girl who suddenly disappeared after I exposed her of e-cheating with me on her e-boyfriend.

Anyway, after years of research and driving to the town she said she was from (900 miles away). I figured out her password and discovered a trail to her REAL accounts and where she lived and her REAL photos and name.

It turns out she lied about Every fucking thing. Her age, what she looked like, her name.

So, I started talking her up on her real profile and she fucking FREAKS the fuck out and blocks me.

I create a shitload of accounts and start talking to her over and over until she talks to me.

She finally talks to me.

It turned out that instead of her being a pretty japanese girl who was 19. She was actually a fat german girl who was 17.

So she tells all her friends I'm stalking her.

One of her friends is interested in me. So I add her on myspace.

Then I add more friends.

I eventually add nearly all this girls friends including her ex.
and i drive over there and meet him and we become best friends.
she explodes at me years later and says i ruined her life.

I am one of the people that disappears. Being able to end relationships with people easily is the best thing about the internet.
I usually like a person at first, but over time I grow to resent them and sever all ties.
I do the same thing in real life, I don't trust people. I have changed my phone number and moved to a different part of the country without telling anyone several times.
I'm 28 with zero friends right now, but they are easy to make and easy to get rid of when I tire of them.

My mom went back to college in the early 90s, I guess 91-92 (sister was born in 91 and she was in school then). We got internet around that same time. It was stupid to 6 year old me, but fast forward a couple of years like 95, 96 and I'm 12-13, and start talking to a girl named Krystal who lived a state above me. No kind of sexual talk happened at first, did some, mostly just bullshit about life. She had bad homelife, etc. Typical whore stuff. Talked for years, we were the same age, entered high school at the same time, graduated, etc. Were friends on Myspace....went to college, she met a guy, got married kept talking and then over time...nothin...not sure if it was me or her who never emailed the other one back, we'd both switched to gmail and all that by this point. This was maybe 2008-ish whenever Failbook was getting really popular. She (or maybe I) just vanished. Kinda sucks, we would talk at least once a week later in life but it was like losing a life long friend. Last year, I had to go to the town she lived in (it's a bigger city) on business and I swear my waitress at Applebees looked like her, but I didn't say anything, I was with my wife.

as a frequent online friend ditcher. I can tell you now. We were bored and wanted someone to chat to and eventually screw over or just toy with emotionally. And we left because you talked too much or asked too many stupid questions.

Its /b/ you guys give good advice 10% of the time.

I've done some shit, some serious shit, won't be able to stay where I'm at for too long, the job I'm in will crash sooner than later due to financial mismanagement, once that happens, I gotta jet.
Now, I know a girl online, irish girl, and I've got feelings for her, I've told her more shit than I've ever told anyone else, and she was ok with everything.

Gentlemen, what do you suggest?

i remember ages ago playing early runescape when it was good and becoming friends with and later being flirted hard by 2 girls who were sisters, i assumed because they weren't retarded like everyone else there and being hard on the flirting they must have been at least 16

they were 9/10, what the fuck

Met a swedish dude on a CS server back in the early 2000s cant remember the specific time. We spoke all the time and made a clan together, his english was really good aswell as I recall. He too disappeared out of nowhere and I haven't talked to him since.

The only things I can remember is that his name was Mike (or similar swedish spelling) and he was a skater.

This kinda thing only happens to me for servers in Counter Strike.

I started off on this server with a name that I never use because I was just fucking around. I find out that the server is fairly new and they are looking for people to join their Clan. Not the scrim type of clan just the fuck around and keep the server in check type of clan. Eventually I worked my way up to Admin and had a ton of people who looked up to me because I was there since day one(ish). I made a bunch of friends on their and one day I decided to stop playing for a while and when I go back on the server is gone.

This kind of thing happens ALL the fucking time on Counter Strike. I become really friendly with a server full of bros and chicks and suddenly its all gone and so are all the players...

It was a great time, with some great folks. Don't talk to more than a few now, which is a shame but happens. One guy ended up in jail. Not too sure why, though.

One person I miss more than most was a girl I used to play with. A fair bit older than me, I used to think of her as an older sister. She got married, started playing WoW, then after a little while just vanished.

I used to play Club Penguin five years ago and I stumbled across a kids forum about this game. I talked to a few cool people there (found out I wasn't the only thirteen-year-old who like to play children games). There was one girl who I used to talk to for two years over an online chat, but same thing happened to me as OP - one day she just stopped visiting all chats, forums, not to mention Club Penguin.

Right now I don't make any friends over the Internet. What I like about 4chan the most is that everyone is anonymous - no usernames, no accounts - so I don't get somehow "attached" to certain people. I only have friends IRL.

I met some of the most awesome and strangest people on 1.6. Had a good group of friends I went to CAL-M with. Used to steal accounts together. One of them got excited with a PayPal that had like $3,000 and started buying all the Silk Road items he could. Found out they didn't really care about me though when I visited California and no one would let me visit, even though they were literally thirty minutes away. Knew a stoner who was living on the street and his parents' houses, came online after a few days' absence and told me about how he'd been stealing food from a nursing home. Had lots of odd encounters with psycho girls. Even started a China-centric clan with one (called ai.cn, "love.china"). She became obsessed, asked for my phone number and started calling me at fucking midnight when I was trying to sleep for school wanting to have phonesex. Found out later she was a fat whale and daughter of some restaurant owner (which might have explained the fatness). Got really bored with CAL and teamed up with a Korean friend to see how far we could go with wallhacks. Joined a Main clan and won some matches but decided to quit before we were found out.

'side from that. Knew an admin from the oooold-as-fuck Graal Online server Unholy Nation named Retaw who died in a suicide bombing. RIP, bro.

Back in my teens, met a Russian kid called Sasha, on WoW. This is right after I started playing, him too, about level 5-10 and both playing Tauren, he was a level lower but we were both on our mains a lot so we did all the same quests and w/ever
One day he disappears completely, now we've both been online literally everyday for weeks, so this is weird, but I forget about it for a few days.
Still no sign.

I sent him a letter.

Weeks go by.

Eventually I get one line about rolling an Ally rog on some other server, with his new char name so I can follow suit.

got to level 65 before I quit WoW but, I lost the letter and he never came back to my server.

I was helping that guy learn English :'(

My only other experience like this was

>Be 15 virginfag

>Meet 15 yr old virginfag femanon online

>Cyber daily for weeks >turns into a real friendship, we swap numbers and talk through all our personal shit

>One day she calls: "Hello"

> "Is this anon?" Man's voice

> "uh..... yeah"

>Never contact my sister again

>Turns out he found her chatlogs and told their parents.

>4 years later I can't remember if I emailed her or her me, but we randomly get back in touch for all of thirty seconds before I find out she's a christfag.

Sorry Amy, you looked nice in black and all, but never been in touch since.

She actually introduced me to the <3 symbol. True story.

Same guy from that story here.

Just to clarify.

She had some boyfriend whom she called occasionally. But she was cybering me on the side.

Then suddenly she stopped talking to me.

I then got into the chatroom that the other guy hung out at and pretended to be just a random person asking about him having a gf. He then admitted to still being with the girl who randomly stopped talking to me. I couldn't take it anymore. Because he was completely clueless about the cheating. So I then send him hundreds of logs of her cybering me and talking badly behind his back.

He literally starts shaking and was not expecting this.

She flips out and finally emails me after all this time of no contact. Tells me that we meant nothing, etc, etc...

She had previously given me her phone number with 2 digits missing and basically tried to leave it for another conversation when she'd tell me the rest or I guessed the numbers.

I call around 300~ numbers and finally get her mom. She had then been staying at her aunt, so her mom gives me her aunt's number. I call her aunt to talk to her and apologize. Her aunt hands her the phone and she then hangs up.

I then still thought she was japanese.

That's when I commenced preparations to drive over there (even though I had no address, I just went into places she said she worked at, but she never worked at those places either). I ultimately found her because she had unregistered all her yahoo accounts in fear, and I then re-registered them and was able to get her password to everything because I was able to send myself a password reminder through photobucket.

I ultimately just wanted to tell her that I'm sorry that I told on her online bf.

You don't know the shit she said for years on end, man.

Shit like, "Never leave me."

And, "If I ever stop talking to you, then something will have happened to me."

She was psycho.

And her ex (who is now my best friend) agrees.

And so do nearly all the people she went to high school with.

I don't give a single fuck if I came across as stalkerish. You don't use fake pics and tell me you love me for years on end and then simply disappear without expecting me to come looking for you.

Guys don't give a fuck if it's for something like this. She had it coming.

I've met some pretty cool people from XBL and forums. A lot of people actually. I had a full friends list of people back in 07-09 just from halo. Then just lost touch with a lot of them.

Still talk to one of them pretty much everyday. His names Austin and he lives in the Ohio Kentucky area. Countless hours of pc and Xbox. Mostly halo. Now he is having some family bs and is having his Internet shut off. I really don't want to lose contact.

I got a field too long error, it's two stories, so I've separated them.

Story one:

>Get Internet in late winter / early spring 1993.

>Up until then had been doing the BBS scene.

>Had been already using computers for 8 years, iNTEL platform, DOS, so UNIX shell accounts and terminal emulation was no problem.

>Started downloading everything I that thought was interesting, programs, pictures, ASCII art, music MODs, games, e-texts.

>Had to start buying hundreds of 1.44 floppy disks and dozens of hard drives to hold all my loot.

>Fast forward to 1999 - 2003, I have been on the Internet continuously (until this very day), FireTalk / PalTalk comes out. I get an account, meet talk to and get to know people from all over the world.

>Meet a farmer from South Africa, talk to him about once a week for about 6 months. He tells us about how things really are in South Africa and that the media and international news are not reporting how nigras (blacks) are killing farmers all over South Africa. After hearing from him regularly, he suddenly stops contacting us and we never hear from him ever again. I fear he was killed.

Alright /b/ I got two that stand out for me.

>Be playing Star Wars Galaxies upon release (24 now so about 14 then)

>Befriend Bothan named Dag (was planning on having Nabbit as surname later)

>He was older, around 30?

>Helped me quest, gave me stuff, everything (no pedo)

>Got me into "Reb for Life" guild (later "White Knights")

>Got me a fucking holocron (a week before they become useless)

>Attend ingame wedding for two other guildies

>He gives me set of clothes to wear as I'm in shitty armour battle gear (stand out from crowd). Save me massive embarrassment

>Combat upgrade comes out

>Around this time account stops getting paid for (Think my Dad was paying for it)

>Never see him again, simple as that.

Thorns Kameha - Zabrak - TKM - Can't remember which server! American one I think, though I'm Brittag. I miss you mate, you taught me a lot.

The other;

>Play Everquest 1

>Be Woodelf called Thorns (think I had Kameha as surname later) - Can't remember server
>Shit at this game, stayed in Kelethin, Crushbone dungeon for ages >Met Dwarf (name I can't remember, started with 'S' I think... Something like Strassim or something)
>Around my age, can't remember
>Played loads together in this zone
>He always went afk cause his younger sister was either upset or going mental (think there was something wrong with her but never pried)
>Best of buds, real tight, helped each other level in crushbone
>Says he's gotta go afk one day as his sister is crying
>Doesn't log out, so I stand by his char (we were standing by bridge to the Keep in Crushbone)
>Doesn't come back
>Can't remember if I leave first or his char times out >Never hear from him again.

Dude, I miss you, hope you're well.

 >I collect audio broadcasts from a common educational speaker named Richard James McDonald along with my west cost friends. I've got years of them saved.
 >2005, one of my west coast friends wants a copy of all my broadcasts and offers to trade me all his broadcasts. I agree but have to hunt up all the burned CDs and hard drives (now about 60 to 90 hard drives) I've got laying around.
 >My west coast friend (his name was Spencer) sends me about 4 CDs full of all the broadcasts he recorded, promised me and asks me to reciprocate.
 >I delay for months because I'm a chronic procrastinator. Meanwhile, he repeatedly asks me if I've got the CDs compiled and burned. I keep making excuses...
 >One day I log into PalTalk to meet all my west coast friends and they are bumming out. >Spencer whom I promised the CD trade with committed suicide on the railroad tracks. I feel terrible and wonder if my delay caused his suicide as the materials I had were very crucial to his life's plans.
 >I still have the CDs he sent me, they are dual packed, I've never opened the inner package or listened to them to this day. I feel bad every time I find them in my belongings I've packed away.
 >All my regrets.

I used to frequent a certain gaming forum. It was sort of rivaled with a similar other gaming forum. Anyways, it was a really lonely stage in my young life where I didn't really fit in, and I made lots of friends at this site. Eventually, the owner is no longer able to pay for the site because all his money went to pot. So, once that happened a lot of us went to said rival site. It never quite felt the same, and a lot of the guys that made that other site really cool sort of fell off the face of the Earth. Had a lot of fun in those days. I remember the worst thing was there was this kid who I only knew by his sn--Smokey. One week he stopped posting. His "mother" signed into his account one day to share that he had been killed in an accident on the way to his father's house one day. She closed the post with the obituary for her son. There were people in my graduating class in high school that have died since then, and none of their deaths had saddened me like the loss of this kid whom I only knew as Smokey.

- >meet an older girl that calls herself kitty
- >says shes a lesbian
- >"thats ok me too"
- >proceed to cyber and get nudes from her
- >actually start having deep conversations

- >couple years later no longer weaboo
- >I rarely ever get online
- >dont see any problem with quitting

- >months later she emails me to catch up
- >I reply saying I missed her etc
- >she never replies back

Still miss her, even though it's been 2 years since the emails. Pretty badass chick and worked at a gun range. Still get the feeling she was too good to be true, and she/he probably got the same vibes.

Honestly, I'm in that position too. Want to talk to her again, but desperately afraid she'll hate me for randomly leaving. None of that matters though. If you miss them, talk to them. They'll have been thinking about you too. Good luck, friend.

play wow for years. have a guild with people from my state. talk to them all day everyday about real life stuff more than in game stuff. they know where I work and they invite each other to parties and stuff.
Im happy to have the convos and talk about shit bt never want to see them irl.

my only irl friends in the game stop playing and I lose interest.
I tell the guild I wont be playing anymore.
they keep telling me they need me (This was in like 06 when gearing and rad prep took months) tell them I cant afford to buy gamecards and my parents wont let me use their credit cards.
I stop playing.
a week or so later one of the guildies comes to my work and asks if I played wow before (was at a cafe and had a name badge on so he knew it was me)
I say yes not realising straight aay he was from the guild.
he said he got m a game-card and hands me a bag, he buys a coffee and stares at me smiling while he waits for it. he asks what time I finish work and says he'll talk to me later.

I used the gamecard, played for a week and then deleted my account (got it back and made new chars years later) he still came past my work every few weeks and said hi.
I hated it. I never want online stuff to mix with the real world again. work people thought i was weird. I thought that guy was crazy. It was fucking creepy.
Youre better off not ever hearing from these people again...

way back pre-CU on star wars galaxies. My uncle got me into it, and met quite a few people that were pretty awesome. One woman I met played quite a bit. Her husband worked, her kids went to school, and she was stuck in a chair all the time due to lu gherig's disease. she was awesome as hell, talked to her about all kinds of anime, music, other games, etc.

after a while, money got tight and I had to quit the game. A year or so later, i tried out the free trial thing to see how many of my friends were still playing (none. fuck CU!). I did a google search for her game name, and found she used the same name in WoW. unfortunately, i only knew this by finding a thread on a WoW forum mentioning her, sort of an e-ology from her guildmates for her passing several months prior. I baww'd.

...I miss Karywn... ;_;

I ended up going to collage with one of the girls I had met over neopets. I had spoken to her for about 4 years before we realised one day that we had enrolled in the same place. Was so amazing and so weird to meet up and study together. She's so real too. I love you, Jess talked to him for a good 6 or 7 years everyday.

became really close some how.
and then out of nowhere. he logged on. said goodbye and that i was his only friend and all this other stuff how id been the reason he wasnt killing himself. and so i immediately freaked and tried sending him a message not to go but i was too late.
he never logged back on.

its pretty depressing
